

CHINESE FLEES HERE TO ESCAPE VIOLENT DEATH

Former Honolulu Back Again
After Participating In Revolution

Sentenced to death as a revolutionist against the Chinese government and saved from execution at the last moment by George F. Anderson, American consul at Hongkong, was the remarkable experience of Sung Shui Kwai, a Hawaiian-Chinese and an American citizen, associate editor of the Liberty News since February 2.

Kwai was taken to China from his native home in Hawaii 19 years ago, he then being but 3 years old. He became one of the leaders in the revolution under Sun Yat Sen and after serving as colonel in the army of the new republic until it disbanded, he became head of Sun Yat Sen's party in the Sun On district of southern China. The revolution against Yuan Shih Kai in 1913 placed him under suspicion and he fled to Hongkong. Frequently he would leave the protection of British rule for a trip to the interior in disguise to promote the cause of Dr. Sun. On November 7, 1914, the governor of the district ordered the British authorities to arrest him secretly. He was confined in the top story of the Hongkong prison and given only criminal rice to eat for over a month.

This treatment, he claims, was in violation of British law which demands a trial for prisoners. He managed to get a letter out to friends who informed the American consul, Anderson, of his secret arrest. Although the consul protested that Kwai was not only an American citizen but also a political refugee and as such could not be turned over to the Chinese authorities, the prisoner was given a mock trial and sent to Canton heavily guarded.

When told of his pending transfer to Chinese officials anxious for his life, the revolutionist exclaimed:

"Let me die here. I am a political refugee and deserve political not criminal treatment. I won't be taken to Canton."

Whereupon he broke his bonds, seized a water bottle from the table and breaking it on his own head hurled the neck at the prison judge.

For seven days he was confined in chains in Canton, but Consul Anderson got in communication with the American consul there and together they effected his release after the date of execution had been set.

Consul Anderson procured passage for the refugee on the S. S. China which landed him in Honolulu February 2.

Gratitude to the consul is uppermost in the mind of the Chinese patriot, and although he may not return to China for the next ten years on the penalty of immediate death, he is content to work for Sun Yat Sen from Honolulu where the Chinese revolution was first hatched.

The bill designed to prohibit men to hire out as "hit-the-nigger" doggers at amusement resorts failed to pass the New York senate.

WAIKIKI INN REORGANIZED; BREWERY MAN MANAGER

Reorganization of the Waikiki Inn was completed yesterday when Harry S. Jones, who recently purchased the property at auction, gave a lease on it to the Waikiki Inn Corporation, Ltd. At the same time it was announced A. A. Aalberg, secretary of the Honolulu Brewing & Malting Company, would take over the management of the inn.

The taking of the lease by the Waikiki Inn Company obviates the necessity of getting a new liquor license, as the present license is held by that company. The appointment of Aalberg also means that the brewery will regain control of the inn, as it is said it already controls the stock.

Morris Rosenblatt was discharged as receiver yesterday, receiving $1000 for his services. E. F. Peters, attorney for the receivership, received $600.

Fourteen persons were killed and eighteen injured when a landslide wrecked a passenger train on the Vico-Arsene line in Spain.

F-4 "HOODOO CRAFT" SAYS BUILDING FIRM

[By Latest Mail]
SEATTLE, Wash., March 26. — Among the representatives of the Electric Boat Company, her builders, the naval submarine F-4 was regarded as something of a hoodoo craft from the start.

As she was being launched from the yards of the Seattle Construction and Dry Dock Company's yard here, where she was built, she failed to hold a true course down the skids and in making the water lurched over against an adjacent wooden wharf, doing considerable damage to the structure.

In the slide she lost the flag flying at the stern. In May, 1913, while proceeding from Seattle to Port Townsend to undergo builder's test, submarine F-4 ran ashore on a sandspit at West Point.
